While Denmark's position is unlikely to affect the ultimate deployment decisions of Britain or West Germany, it reflects the widespread unease about the missiles that pervades Europe this spring.

Among the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's smaller members in northern Europe, there is the deep irustration of being unable to influence the outcome of arms neectiations and yet dependent for their security on what happens at

OECD Ministers Stress Linkage In Economies

By Carl Gewirtz

onal Herold Tribune PARIS - An acknowledgement that "powerful economic linkages" among countries and regions "imply a collective responsibility to shape policies" was made here Monday by senior government of-ficials of the 24 most industrialized

The officials, attending the annual ministerial meeting of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, agreed on the importance of taking these linkages into account "as fully as possible" in formulating domestic economic policy.

But they made no commitments to alter current policies to assure that they comply with this goal. The main topic on the first day of the ministers' two-day meeting was on interdependence, giving special attention to economic rela-tions with East-bloc countries and the developing nations in the rest

Fears that the East-West discussion would produce a new confrontation between the United States and its allies were dissipated when Secretary of State George P. Shultz assured ministers that Washington's misgivings about East-bloc trade do not represent a policy of "economie warfare" against the Soviet Union.

But, be said, "We should apply to our economic relations with the East the same prudent commercial and financial criteria that we would apply to any other business venture." He said that "the more pervasive problem we face today is not political interference restricting East-West trade but political inter-ference maintaining it."

The OECD working paper analyzing the deepening of interna-tional economic linkages frankly stated that recognition of this inter-dependence will never mean that one country will sacrifice its own perceived interest just to be a good neighbor. The paper said that discussing and coordinating policy adjustments to arrive at better outcomes than mucht be achieved by acting alone adds up to a worse outcome for all countries than could be achieved by closer coordi-

A U.S. official, however, appeared to play down the importance of this principle. Martin S. Feldstein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, said in an interview that interdependence means something very different here [in Europe] than in the United States — mainly because the balance-of-payments constraint is a consideration here and isn't in the United States.

"I understand the argument that says, for example, Norway can't expand very fast without running into balance-of-payments constraints and therefore it's important that Norway talk to Germany and agree on concerted and coordinated expansion.

"For the United States, it doesn't make a lot of sense because are not really constrained by the balance-of-payments problem. Even though we have a very large trade deficit, it's really not a factor that has influenced our decision on how fast to expand. We are prepared to accept a large trade defi-cit. The constraints really come from thinking about inflation and the sustainability of the recovery at

"So while Norway or the Scandinavian countries and Germany can usefully talk to each other about how if each one expanded the other one could expand more, the United States doesn't have a role in that dialogue because the fact that the rest of the OECD is expanding more will not cause us to change our goals." The secretariat's analytical pa-per, however, recalling the 1977-78 run on the dollar, noted that "even the largest OECD economy (the United States), with a relatively small share of trade in gross national product, is not immune from

Western Nations Set Limits On Soviet Gas Dependence

At the same time, it called on IEA members to pursue development of alternative gas sources, no-tably in the North Sea and in North America. The agreement was announced by William F. Birch, New Zealand's minister of energy, who chaired a two-day meeting of IEA energy ministers that ended in Paris Monday.

Senior U.S. diplomatic officials said that they viewed the accord as a significant diplomatic achievement for the Reagan administra-tion, which had been seeking a commitment from its allies avoid increasing their dependence on Soviet gas.

"The provisions and wording in the agreement, while low-key and not quantitative, mean the same thing - we all agree to limit our dependence on the Soviets, while actively pursuing other alterna-tives." a senior U.S. official said.

Kenya President Sees Coup Plot

The Surface A NAIROBI (Reuters) - President Daniel Arap Moi of Kenya has accused foreign countries of plotting to overthrow him, according to the official Kenyan News Agency.

Mr. Moi said at a raily Sunday in Kisii, western Kenya, that the foreign states, which he did not identify, were training someone to take over as president, the agency said. It was the first mention by Mr. Moi of a plot against him since the army crushed a rising by junior Kenvan airmen on Aug. I last year. MOSCOW - Yuri V. Andropov.

Recently three cabinet ministers have accused politicians, without leader of the Soviet Union, was re-ferred to Monday for the first time naming them, of ploiting to topple the government. On May 1, Mr. Moi ordered his ministers to "stop washing their dirty linen in public" in an as chairman of the Soviet Defense Council, the body thought to have supreme control in the event of apparent reference to the infighting that the allegations of conspiracy are widely believed to reflect.

Deaths Put at 35 in Istanbul Fire

ISTANBUL (AP) — Officials said Monday that the fire that raged through a central hotel on Saturday killed two Turks and 33 foreign tourists, mostly Greeks and Austrians. "This is the final toll. Two dead Turks were taken away by relatives and we have 33 bodies left in the morgue;" said a spokesman for the coroner's office.

Initially, the death toll was reported at 42 by city and fire squad officials and was later reduced to 37. Most of the 60 people initially reported as wounded had minor injuries and were released from hospitals, officials said. The officials said only 27 remained hospitalized Mon-

Nicaragua Says Invaders Defeated

MANAGUA (Renters) — An invasion by Honduran-based rebels has been defeated after heavy fighting, Nicaraguan military sources said

Monday.

They said the rightist rebels were pushed back across the border Sunday and that only small groups that split from the main insurgent force remained in the mountains of Nueva Segovia province. Nicaragua has said the rebels regrouped in Honduras after an invasion attempt failed last week and began a new thrust Friday.

In the United Nations Security Council on Monday, Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto Brockmann of Nicaragua accused the United States of waging an undeclared war against his country and called on the council to adopt measures to stop the aggression.

Swedish Navy Pressing Sub Hunt

SUNDSVALL. Sweden (Reuters) — The Swedish Navy, convinced that at least two foreign submarines are intruding in its waters off this northern port, is prepared for a long hunt to catch them, a military spokesman said Monday.

"We are not getting tired and time is on our side," he said as the hunt with ships and helicopters went into its 12th day. "We have all the resources we need," he said when asked if Swedish submarines were

U.S. Agency Gets Rules on Suicide Threats Social Security Urged to Be Sensitive in Cutting Off Benefits

By Robert Pear New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The Reagan administration has devised new procedures to deal with people who threaten to kill themselves after being told they may lose their Social Security disability benefits. Paul B. Simmons, deputy commissioner of Social Security, said the rules would soon be sent to Social Security offices around the country and to state agencies that operate the program of disability payments and retirement benefits under federal policies.

The detailed procedures say that federal and state employees should take special care in handling suicide threats, should refer the claimant to a counseling service or a suicide hot line and should consider suicidal tendencies in evaluating the severity of a disability.

for does not necessarily mean a person has a mental disability qualifying him for benefits. The seven-page directive represents the first acknowledgment by the Social Security Administration of a significant problem with

However, the directive says suicidal behav-

There is no official count of the suicides that may have occurred after benefits were ended, but government psychiatrists and dis-ability examiners said they were aware of many threats.

The new rules say that when a person threatens suicide. "it is important that he or she be treated with the utmost sensitivity, patience, compassion and understanding in all telephone or personal contacts."

The directive says that each state's disability agency should designate one official to compile and review all information about suicides and suicide threats. The state agency is required to inform the local Social Security office before ending or denying benefits to any person where "a high degree of suicidal-homicidal potential exists."

Mr. Simmons said the policy was one of many steps being taken to make the disability program more humane. Under the pro-

In the last two years, the government has removed 340,000 beneficiaries from the rolls after they were found not to be disabled at the initial stage of review.

Critics have assailed the review process, saying that many people with obvious mental or physical defects lost their benefits. Demo-crats have cited the terminations as evidence of the "unfairness" of President Ronald Reagan's policies.

A recent report by the General Accounting Office, an investigative arm of Congress, said the Social Security Administration, because of an "overly restrictive interpretation" of the eligibility criteria, had improperly cut off benefits for many people with "severe mental impairments."

The mechanics of exchange intervention are only slightly less complicated than the ideological passions it arouses. But it is worth understanding. The aim is to stabilize currency values by having governments buy or sell their own and other currencies. Buying boosts demand and tends to raise the value; selling does the opposite. This technique cannot ultimately save a weak currency or break a strong one, but it can have short-term value. It is obviously more effective when practiced in concert with other governments, rather than unilaterally. So concluded the finance ministers, including Mr. Regan before he reneged.

The reason for coordinated intervening however, is anything but technical. It is to relieve the damage done when uncoordinated now because America's interest rates are obstinately high and because recession and other uncertainties make the United States the saf-

Io the quarter-century of great success following World War II, the American mass production industries learned habits that more recently flave served them badly. They learned to get very high productivity through long produc-tion runs, with minimal model changes. They were working with standard products in which improvements were typically incremental. De-yelopment work became increasingly separated from manufacturing. A steady flow of prof-its ratified all of these practices.

As time went oo, managers very often began to take the manufacturing process for granted and diverted brains and energy to other parts of the business — usually finance and mer-chandising. All of that happened in a period when Americans were not under much pressure from foreign competition — bot then conditions changed very fast in the 1970s with the sudden expansion of American trade.

Mideast Strategies

Secretary George Shultz is vindicated as a tactician but his reputation as a strategist in Middle East politics is still to be won or lost. In the perspective of history, the achievement of negotiating an agreement between Israel and Lebanon will count for little if that agreement is never implemented.

However desirable it may be from an Arab and perhaps even from an international point of view that Israel should not be rewarded for her invasion of Lebanon last year, to suppose that she would withdraw unconditionally was never realistic. The agreement she has now accepted comes much closer to that than most people would have imagined possible; and many Israelis, including some ministers who voted for it, are already saying that it falls far short of justifying the losses that Israel

The Lord Mayors' Visit

The recent visit to Boston of the Lord Mayors of Dublin and Belfast highlights a quiet, persistent effort to find a cooperative solution to the difficulties of Northern Ireland.

Tom Patton of Belfast urged his audiences to visit Northern Ireland as tourists and to invest in it as businessmen. He stressed that the violence, deplorable though it is, is concentrated almost totally on members of the Brit-ish and Irish security forces. Significantly, Patton's message was seconded by Dan Browne

1908: The Fighting in Korea

TOKYO — Details of the new military policy in Korea are announced. Reinforcements are now being forwarded to make the Japanese strength io Korea two full divisions. The exact number of armed Koreans is not ascertainable, but it is estimated to be several thousands. The insurrection is declared to have lost its political character, and its insurgents will henceforth be regarded as bandits. Under the new order the dissipation of the roving bands calling themselves the "rightcous army" becomes strictly a military problem. The army will not be hampered by the civil administration. The Japanese troops will remain permanently to the field if needed.

NEW YORK - President Franklin Roosevelt's actions, outlined in his radio speech Sunday night, in which he gave an account of his direction of the government and his appeal two nights previously not to permit wages to lag behind the cost of living have had an electrifying effect, and wage increases for 50,000 employees in 25 states have been granted, according to a survey. Besides increased wages, reports show an increase in the production of coal, lumber, steel, motor cars and electric power. Henry Ford proclaims his faith in "a new deal" in an open letter in which be says: "We have made a complete turnaround, and at last America's face is toward the future."

Congress's Hand in Foreign Policy: Is It Too Heavy?

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Virginia — A presi-dent today must speak loudly because he carries a small stick. President Ronald Reagan's dramatic appearance before Congress to appeal for support for his Central American policy bad all the trappings of power: ceremony, applause and media attention. But all this pomp could not obscure the deeper reality that the president stood before Congress, hat in hand, begging for the right to be able to direct his own foreign policy. There are two possible explanations for the president's tenuous position in foreign affairs. Either he has squandered, through blunders and incompetence, a power that was his, or be never had that power.

Critics of the president are fond of charging that the administration has oever articulated a consistent or reasonable policy. But Mr. Reagan plainly faces restrictions that are not all of his own making.

In recent times, a lack of flexibility for the executive in foreign affairs has become the norm, not the exception. It is rooted in a growing number of legal restriction; and also in the belief held by key members of Congress that the province of the conduct of foreign affairs is as much theirs as it is the president's.

Beginning with the Vietnam-Watergate era, the United States has been moving closer to a system of co-determination of the substance of foreign policy. The president retains the power to initiate, but his initiatives are so hemmed in by congressional checks that his control of the process is uncertain. Proof of this can be seen in many of the presidential "victories" of recent times — such as the sale of AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia, or Mr. Reagan's efforts to continue military aid to El Salvador. In these instances and others in recent administrations, presidential successes consisted of little more than the staving off of

In areas such as arms sales and military assistance, the laws have been written so that the burden of proof for carrying out a policy has been shifted. Whereas in the past Congress had to assume the initiative in order to block a presidential action, now many presidential policies are subject to routine and automatic review embarrassing and debilitating setbacks.

Along with these legal restrictions, a new at-otude about the making of foreign policy has emerged in Congress. Members of Congress are no longer reluciant to assert an active role in formulating policies by attaching detailed provises to authorization or appropriation legislation — such as the Boland Amendment, which denies the use of U.S. funds to overthrow the

The new role of Congress in foreign affairs emerged initially in reaction to the Vietnam War, and reflected a conscious desire to correct what was considered to be a dangerous concentration of power in the executive. Since then, however, Congress has moved further to limit executive discretion. The subsequent erosion has been the result not of any scrious consideration of the balance between the president and Congress, but of the desire of different groups in Congress to achieve specific policy objec-tives. Hawks and doves bave each pecked away at one or another of the executive's prerogatives in order to win a temporary advantage. This has led to an unintended erosion of the executive's margin of maneuver. We should not think that the United States, led by a weak execuove, can continue to play an effective leading role in world affairs. With the changing institutional balance, some perverse political incentives have developed. In foreign affairs, congressmen have little to gain from supporting the president, but much to gain by opposing him. Successes in foreign affairs redound to the benefit of the president, whereas setbacks redound to the benefit of members of Congress who claim that they had the foreign by a concess that frustrations in foreign affairs as the consequence of the actions of foreign nations has been changed. Instead, there is an increasing tendency for these frustrations to be played out between the president and Congress. Every presidential initiative is now put on trial before Congress, and any momentary setback is seen as a failure of the president's policy. He is placed in the awkward position of being an emissary before Congress for the nations he is seeking to assist. The dangers of overselling foreign commitments are now implicit in U.S. foreign policy; the president lacks the discretion to follow a policy that is based on a prudent assessment of calculated risks.

Solutions are difficult to come by. Modern presidents, fearful of angering the very persons whom they must flatter to win support for their policies, are reluctant to challenge the institu-tional prerogatives of Congress. And radical so-lutions that would eliminate the separation of powers are not realistic.

Congress does have a major tole to play in foreign affairs. The problem is to ask whether Congress has not unconsciously allowed itself to assume responsibilities that go beyond its authority (or capacity) to act effectively.

Japanese Weary of Junior-Partner Treatment

WASHINGTON — "At interna-VV tional meetings," a Japanese official recently told me, "we feel that the Europeans don't really want to talk to us. Oh sure, they make the pro forma gestures — they have to. But the Europeans really only want to talk to the Americans."

This sums up a bitter feeling among many Japanese, who feel that despite their country's tremendous postwar economic surge and new willingness to accept a share of international burdens, Europeans treat them as second-class citizens

1979 economic summit in Tokyo, they were excluded from two important meetings. One was a breakfast for the so-called "Guadeloupe Group" — leaders of the United States, France, Britain and West Germany who had met in the Caribbean carlier that year. The government has allowed black unions to operate, and they are making some headway. Expensive restaurants and hotels are now allowed to desegregate.

Yet even these changes in the pattern of discrimination are not a lowed to proceed consistently. The government, which has quietly let blacks enter universities labeled white by law, now proposes to limit their oumbers by quotas. The Preto-ria City Council has voted to exclude blacks from 14 parks that were deseg-regated in 1974. Leaders of black unions have been harassed, detained, even tortured. Moreover, Prime Minister P.W. Botha's major declared program for constitutional reform has run into heavy resistance. His plan is to set up separate parliamentary chambers for colored people, as those of mixed race are called, and for Asians.

Blacks would still be excluded from national politics. But even that limited change has aroused fierce op-position within the Afrikaner com-munity. The dominant National Par-ty faces dangerous challenges from the right in by-elections this week.

WASHINGTON — In its holy war of potenties against the Roman Catholic bishops, the right suffered heavy losses. In Chicago, the bishops voted 238-9 for a final pastoral letter that echoed the memorable "No more war" cry of Pope Paul VI in 1965. "The whole world," the bishops said, "must summon the moral courage and technical means to say 'no' to an arms race which robs the poor and the vulnerable."

For a time, it appeared as if the bishops had lost the moral nerve to bishops had lost the moral nerve to challenge the Reagan administradon's policies of preparedness for a nuclear war. In November, the bishops issued a strong second draft of their letter. By April and a third draft, they were backsliding. They had gone from advocating a "half" to nuclear weapons to seeking a "curb," which was reassingless. They quested which was meaningless. They quoted pieties of Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and William Clark, the national security adviser.

The weak third draft drew bosannas from the right-wing choir. The National Review, which had been rouonely dismissing the "born again bishops" as appeasers, hailed the third draft on the eve of the Chicago meeting as a "substantial improve-ment" over the second. Michael Novak of the American Enterprise Insti-tute, who had been scolding "extrem-ist" bishops for their "hubris" and who said the second draft "moves the world very close to war," found the third draft "more attuned to conflicting realities than earlier drafts."

In Chicago, the bishops showed they had nerve after all. They rediscovered the word "halt." They relegated Mr. Weinberger and Mr. Clark to footnotes. They told the Retgan administration to look for someone else to bless the oukes. As peacemakers, the bishops stayed the course.

The right can be expected cow to recycle its bitter attacks. The hissing is likely to be sharper, especially since it appeared as though the bishops would beed the right and behave as proper chaptains to the

While the Japanese sovernment may feel the problem is well in hand, Kawasaki, just south of Tokyo, last fall recorded its 600th air pollution death since 1970. Osaka and Amagasaki have had even more deaths officially recognized as due to air pollution (meaning that pollution was listed on the death certificate as the cause of death).

The government criteria for determining air-pollution casualties are strict, and many people feel that for every officially recognized air-polludon death there are 20 anotheral ones. The contention that air pollution has lessened in Tokyo is only true as far as physical, sunlightblocking particles are concerned. Even so, Mt. 4 Indian States Seek Greater Powers From Central Government

By William Claiborne

Weshington Poul Service
MADRAS, India — Emboldened
by the formation of its strong new regional lobby, and by Prime Minister India Gandhi's initially compliant response to it, the leaders of four southern Indian states are pressing for a major overhaul of their relationships with the federal government.

The movement is still in its early stages and could die out or disintegrate into partisan squabbling. But people on both sides of the issue have acknowledged the poten-tial for fundamental changes in federal-state relations and a resurgence of federalism in the Indian nion.
In the view of leaders from the southern states, the movement could reverse what they regard as an alarming concentration of power by Mrs. Gandhi's governing Congress-I Party in New Delhi and pave the way for the kind of strong state leadership encouraged under the administration of her father, Jawaharlal Nehru, India's first prime minister.

Other Indian leaders, however, have considered far-reathing cen-tral powers a necessity, given the strong and growing separatist and regionalist tendencies of many of the country's states! ; ...

The catalyst for the neofederalist movement was a 10-hour meeting in March of the chief ministers of the states of Tamil Nada, Andhra Pradesh, Kamataka and Pondicherry. The four ministers represent either regional or opposition

An outgrowth of the meeting in Bangalore was the creation of the Southern Council of Chief Ministers, a regional lobby. Its first do-clared intention was to discuss common financial problems, but it has quickly evolved into a united front for pressing the Gandhi government for more decision-making powers and a greater share of fedhalf trade.

Man Survives 2 Days in Capsized Boat

WELLINGTON, New Zealand - Police divers rescued a diabetic fisherman Mooday from a tangle of nets beneath his capsized boat where he had survived for two days by wedg-ing himself into a tiny air pock-et rank with diesel fumes.

Another seaman, the captain of the stricken trawler Jan. clung to the upturned hall of the same boat for 33 bours before he was rescued by helicopter Sunday, authorides said. The 30-foot (9-meter) trawler was capsized in the Tasman Sea by a wave estimated at 56 feet. Reg Stevens, the captain, hung on in 25-knot winds and 13foot seas until a small plane chartered by his fiancée spotted the vessel and called for a beli-copter rescue.

But John Hutley, 53, remained trapped inside the boat in an air pocket about 20 inches (50 centimeters) high between the water line and hull. A local diver tried to free Mr. Hutley on Sunday but was thwarted by a tangled mess of fishing nets and ropes and radioed for help.

Mr. Hutley said he spent the two days thinking about his feelings for his wife and family and thinking about God. "But He never came," Mr. Hutley said. "Satan didn't either. It

Long-Term Treasury Bond Rally Has Limited 'Wild Card Option'

NEW YORK — One of the major reasons Treasury bond futures have long been the most actively traded contracts in the U.S. commodity market is that traders who sell futures short can use what is known as the "sellers put," or "wild card option," when bond cash and futures wrices are falling." futures prices are falling.

What the shorts could do profitably when bond prices were declining was wait until the delivery month arrived, rather than buy out of their position well before the expiration of the contract, which is normally the case in most commodity markets.

Just before expiration, if prices of the underlying bonds were still declining, they would buy the cheapest Treasury bonds they could find in the cash market and deliver or "put" them to holders of the long (buy) futures and thus settle their contractual obligation.

The reason the shorts can do this is that the Chicago Board of Trade permits the delivery of a relatively wide range of Treasury bonds against their contract, so the shorts have a variety of "wild card options." A Treasury bond futures contract consists of $100,000 face Since last February, amount of securities. But the contract cannot specify the value of however, fewer shorts deliverable bonds because that is determined in the open market. have been 'putting' actual bonds to the

Since last February, however, fewer shorts have been "putting" actual bonds to the longs because longs because interest interest rates have been softening and, as a result, prices of long-term rates have been Treasury securities have been rissoftening. Late Friday, after the Federal Reserve announced an unexpected $1.4-billion rise in the M-1 money supply figures, prices of Treasury bonds fell in the cash market. Quickly, bond futures traders who were short the spot June delivery were in the cash market buying the cheaper

"While last Friday's Fed numbers and the subsequent drop in cash bond prices may be a temporary aberration, it helped a lot of hardpressed shorts in the bond futures market," said Norman E. Mains, financial markets research director at Drexel Burnham Lambert's Chica-

The bond futures market closes at 3 p.m. New York time, or an hour before the Fed's weekly money supply figures are amnounced, but the cash market remains open for several hours afterward, Mr. Mains said,

"The time factor is important because the Chicago Board's bond contract specifications give shorts the option of notifying their clearing member broker up to 8 p.m. that they intend to make delivery on any business day during the delivery month, or the two last business days of the previous month. The current spot bond futures contract is June and that contract expires on the 21st of next month."

Big Loss for Shorts

When the bond futures market closed Friday, the June delivery, the most actively traded, was up 10/32, at 79 19/32, which produced a big loss for futures shorts. Each thirty-second of a point is equivalent to $31.25 per contract.

But when the cash market closed, the last quote for the Treasury's 14percent bonds of 2006-11, were down 11/32 on the day. The beliwether 14-percent bonds are usually the cheapest Treasury paper that shorts put to the longs because the prices of these long-term instruments are often

By using the wild card option and sellers put, many arbitragers as well as ordinary traders made large profits when bond prices were tunibling late last year. Mr. Mains said, explaining.

"Stripping away the carrying, or financing costs, arbitragers and other traders were making between 12/32 and 20/32 by buying the 14-percent Treasury bonds in the cash market, especially late on Fridays, and delivering them against the futures."

Value of Sellers Put Shrank

Why Fridays? Mr. Mains replied: "Before the Fed de-emphasized the M-I money supply numbers, each rise in the figures announced every Friday afternoon would cause the cash bond market to plunge, a situa-tion that often carried over to Monday."

But since the M-I numbers were de-emphasized and, concurrently, the rally began in February, the value of the sellers put shrank to as low as 4/32, or an eighth of a point, because investors were bidding up the price of the Treasury 14-percent bonds and other bonds in the cash market, until late last Friday.

Because one-day price moves are meaningless, bond futures shorts. thinking of using the sellers put and wild card option strategies with the expiring June contract should be very careful, he added.

Oil Exploration Turns Competitive

New York Times Service

NEW YORK - When the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed to drop their benchmark price for crude oil by $5 a barrel in March, prolonged infighting appeared to come to an end and oil prices stabilized.

But now another significant — if less visible — issue is breeding divisiveness as producing nations compete for the diminishing

William Adams, an energy analyst also with Phillips, added that because both profits and overall capital expenditures were down for most companies, and because — due to reduced demand in the West — most oil-producing nations could now pump much more oil than they could sell, "The question be-comes where is the investment climate most

His answer, and that of many experts, is that the climate is now most favorable at home. "A relatively benign fiscal regime in the United States, decontrol of oil prices, the federal leasing program, which has put bil-lions of acres of federal land on the market - all of these factors are unprecedented and they are all reasons to invest in the United States. In the 1970s, companies tended to spend outside the United States. Now the trend is to spend within the country."

Mr. Adams mentioned, too, the growing importance of "a number of nations that have not been in the game in the past." Most important among them, he said, is China, a country that should soon be in a position to compete very effectively for exploration capi-tal. China is going to become a place where companies will have to spend money." Mr.

"That's already happening in some developing countries, such as the Philippines and other nations in Asia," said James Tanner, editor of Petroleum Information International. "Terms are getting better."

The type of concessions offered vary from case to case but normally take the form of more favorable arrangements regarding tax-es, royalties and operating costs, discounts ou oil purchases and increased profit margins. House of Fraser's Shareholders Defeat Harrods Spinoff Motion

LONDON (IHT) - House of Fraser said Monday that its shareholders had narrowly defeated a resolution calling for the department store chain to spin off its prime asset, the Harrods store in London.

But Lourho, the mining conglomerate that owns nearly 30 percent of Fraser, plans to force a new vote on the issue at Fraser's annual meeting June 30. Lonrho said Friday's vote in Glasgow was unfair because it was tied to a vote of confidence in Fraser's board and some institutional investors who lavor the spinoff plan were reluctant to attack the board. Lonrho argues that the combined value of a share in an independent

Harrods and one in the rest of Fraser would exceed Fraser's current share price. If the spinoff were cleared, analysts say, takeover speculation would probably push up the prices of both parts, at least temporarily.

By Michael Quint New York Times Service

NEW YORK - U.S. credit markets set aside fears of higher interest rates last week and readily absorbed $2.4 billion of new corporate and foreign offerings at the same time that the Treasury sold $15 billion of new notes and bonds, a record combination of financing for one week.

The week of Treasury refundings is often a time when realities get sorted out and investors take a hard look at just what they expect for interest rates," said William Gibson, chief economist at the Re-public Bank of Dallas. "Everyone gets worried about the heavy supply ahead of time" he said, "but it very often happens that the weeks of beaviest supply are the weeks of greatest investor buying." The success of the corporate and government financings was widely attributed to a belief that shortterm rates would soon decline as money-supply growth subsides from the rapid pace of the first

Although prices rose and yields fell during last week's heavy financing, several market participants noted that the rally was based largely on psychology and expectations of lower rates rather than on any fundamental changes in the outlook.

"The fundamentals are good, but this rally is more psychology than anything else," said Ted Bus-boom, a vice president at Investors Diversified Services.

John Brookmeyer, vice president charge of fixed-income investing at Prudential Insurance, said the balance of forces in the credit markets still leads him to conclude that rates will be essentially flat this

A slowdown in money-supply growth — "which I am not yet completely convinced of" — and low inflation both argue for lower interest rates, he said. On the other hand, he said, the huge federal deficit will keep upward pressure on recovery must be watched for signs of overheating that could bring in-

For large, high-grade corpora-tions, last week's drop in yields presented the first opportunity in about three years to sell long-term bonds at yields below 11 percent. For investors, the corporate offerings were a piquant element to an already full week of Treasury financing and were well received

Although the yield spreads between new corporate issues and comparable Treasuries were the lowest since the late 1970s, many investors were out deterred from buying the corporates. For example, the 10% percent yield on Sears, Roebuck's 30-year, Aa2-rated debentures was only about 47 basis points higher than the yield on the Freasury's 10% percent bonds due in 2012. A basis point is one one-

"As long as the modest recovery continues and long-term rates are higher than short-term rates, we expect spreads to narrow further," Mr. Busboom of IDS said.

Some of last week's price gains were lost late Friday after the Federal Reserve had announced a larger-than-expected $1.4-billion increase in M-1, the narrowest measure of the money supply. The primary bope for the oil ex-porters in general is that demand for petroleum will soon begin to grow again. "That hinges largely on the economic recovery in the West," said William Randol, a securities analyst with First Boston Corp. "It appears that in the second half of the year there will be a substantial recovery that could lead to greater demand. If oot, OPEC has a problem on its hands." Just four years ago, OPEC's output was 31 million barrels a day. Today, output stands at only 14 million barrels a day. But if an upturn in consumption does oot materialize, all bets are off," Mr. Randol added. "Producers who have been 'sacrificing' output for the sake of their financially weaker OPEC brethren would be likely to reassess their positions and, most likely, attempt to recapture market share. In that case, chaos in the oil market would

Nissan Truck Plant In U.S. Starts Up

SMYRNA, Tennessee - The first trucks produced at Nissan's new $660-million plant here began moving on the assembly line Monday and are expected to be completed June 16, the president of the facility said. Marvin Runyon, president of Nissao Motor Manufacturing USA, said the first 40 trucks that will be sold to U.S. consumers will be assembled gradually over a six-week period. Mr. Runyon said the deliberate timetable was established "to be sure that all of our systems are in order and that the quality of each job along the way is where it should be."

Japan Rejects an EC Sugar Plan

By Brij Khindaria International Herald Tribune

GENEVA - Japan has rejected a European Community suggestion that the 10 largest sugar exporters should join to manage world sugar markets through a price-stabilization plan that would substantially raise prices in the initial phase.

The third largest importer after the United States and the Soviet Union, Japan told the United Nations Sugar Conference here that its sugar-refining industry is too weak to bear additional costs. Nor can the Japanese government afford to contribute to stockpiling of expensive sugar by exporting countries to boister world prices, Japan

Shunii Kaboyashi, Japan's chief delegate, insisted that a new International Sugar Agreement should rely chiefly oo export cootrols to excess production out of world markets instead of building up large stocks as proposed by the EC.

The conference, aimed at replacing the current agreement, which has failed to prevent the worst sugar price slide in 20 years, entered its second week Monday.

Both the United States and the EC ran into Third World criticism - the United States because it refuses to import more and the community because it refuses to export less. After making initial policy statements, delegates broke up into groups to discuss details of the kind of mechanisms needed to bolster sugar prices.

in a separate move, Alejandro Martinez Cuenca, the Nicaraguan foreign trade minister, said that

(Convertible into shares of Common Stock of, and unconditionally Guaranteed on a Subordinated Basis as to Payment of Principal, Premium, if any, and Interest by Anixter Bros., Inc.)

Redemption Date: June 1, 1983

Conversion Privilege Expires: May 27, 1983

Anixter International Finance N.V. has called for redemption and will redeem on June 1. 1983 all of its outstanding 81/2% Convertible Subordinated Guaranteed Debentures Due 1996. The redemption price is 104% of the principal amount of each Debenture plus accrued interest to June 1, 1983 of $32.11 for each $1,000 principal amount of Debentures. or a total of $1,072.11 for each $1,000 principal amount of Debentures. The Debentures are convertible into shares of Common Stock of Anixter Bros., Inc. until the close of business on May 27, 1983, at a conversion price of $18.62 per share or 53.70 shares of Common Stock for each $1,000 principal amount of Debentures. As described below. based upon current merket prices, the market value of the Common Stock into which each Debenture is convertible is significantly greater than the amount of cash which would be received upon surrendering such Debenture for redemption.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to the holders of outstanding 81:20 Convertible Subordinated Guaranteed Debentures Due 1996 (the "Debentures") of Anixier International Finance N.V. ("Finance") that in accordance with the terms of the Indenture dated as of January 15, 1981 (the "Indenture") among Finance, Arithder Bros., Inc. (the "Company"), as Guarantor, and The First Natic at Bank of Chicago, as Trustee, Finance has elected to redeem all the outstanding Debentures on June 1, 1983 (the "Redemption Oate"), at a redemption price of 104% of the principal amount thereof plus accrued interest from January 15, 1983 to June 1, 1983, or an eggregate of S1,072.11 for each S1,000 principal amount of Debeniuses. Debeniures, together with all unmatured interest coupons, should be surrendered for payment of the redemption price and accrued interest at the option of the holder (a) (by hand) to The First Neuonal Bank of Chicago. Bond and Coupon Redemption, 40 West Adams Street, Chicago, Illinois, or (by mail) to The First National Bank of Chicago, Bond and Coupon Redemption. One First Netronal Plaza. Chicago, Illinois 60670, or 15f subject to any laws or regulations applicable thereto in the country of any such office, to the offices of the additional Paying and Conversion Agents set forth below. Payment of the redemption price and accrued interest will be made in such coin or currency of the United States of America as at the time of payment shall be legal tender for the payment of public end private debts. Payment at the offices referred to in (b) above shall be made, at the direction of the holder, by check drawn on, or transier to a United States dollar account maintained by the payee with, a bank in the Borough of Manhattan. The City of New York.

On the Redemption Date, the redemption price (plus accrued interest) will become due and payable upon each Debenture and Interest thereon will cease to accrue. After the Redemption Date, the Oebentures with no longer be outstanding in the hands of the holders thereof, and all rights of the holders with respect thereto, including accrual of interest, will cause on and after such date, except only for the right to receive the redemption price and Interest accrued to June 1, 1983. There have been no prior redemptions of the Debentures and, as a result, there have been no

Debentures previously called for redemption and not presented for payment The election of Finance to redeem all of the outstanding Debeniures has been made pursuant to the fifth paragraph of the form of Debeniure. The condition precedent to the right of Finance to redeem the Debeniures pursuant to such fifth paragraph has occurred because the reported last sale prices per share of Common Stock of the Company ("Company Common Stock") on the New York Stock Exchange on each day on which there was such a reported sale price during the 30-day period immediately preceding the 20th day preceding the date upon which this Notice of Redemption was first published was at least 130% of the Conversion Price (as defined in the Indenture) in effect on each such day.

CONVERSION OR SALE ALTERNATIVES

Debentureholders have, as alternatives to redemption, the right to sell their Debentures through usual brokerage fecitities or, before the close of business on May 27, 1983, to convert such Debentures into Company Common Stock. The right to convert the Debentures will terminate at the close of business on

The Debentures may be converted into Company Common Stock at the rate of 53.70 shares for each S1,000 principal amount of Debentures. In order to effect this conversion, a Debentureholder should complete and sign the CONVERSION NOTICE on the Debenture, or a substantially similar notice, and deliver the Debenture and signs induce, if (by hand) to The First National Bank of Chicago, Corporate Trust Unit, 40 West Adams St. Bith Fill Chicago, Illinois, or (by mail) to The First National Bank of Chicago, Corporate Trust Unit, v...4, On State National Plaza, Chicago, Illinois 60670, or (b) subject to any laws or regulations applicable thereto in the country of any such office to the offices of the additional Paying and Conversion Agents set forth below. Upon conversion of Debentures, no payment or adjustment will be made on account of any interest accrued thereon or on account of any dividends on the Company Common Stock issued upon such conversion. A Debenfureholder who converts his Debenfures becomes a shareholder of record on the tie of conversion for the purpose of determining shareholders of record for distributions and other pulposes, and will be eligible to receive any future dividends declared on the Company Common Stock. Debentures delivered for conversion must be accompanied by all interest coupons maturing after the date of surrender. No fractional shares are issuable upon conversion. Deben-tureholders will receive cash, in lieu of any fractional shares, in an amount equal to such fraction multiplied by the last reported sale price of the Common Stock, regular way, on the New York Stock Exchange on the day upon which Debentures are surrendered for conversion.

Pursuant to a Standby Agreement, Drexel Burnham Lambert Incorporated and Blyth Easiman Paine Webber Incorporated (the "Standby Group") have agreed with the Company and Finance to purchase Company Common Stock for an amount Equal to the redemption price plus accrued interest for any Opbentures which are either (i) surrendered for redemption or (ii) not duly surrendered for redemption or conversion. A Debentureholder who wishes to redeem or convert Debentures should not tender Deben-tures directly to the Standby Group but should follow the directions given above.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION FOR OEBENTUREHOLOERS

From August 1, 1982 through May 2, 1983, the Company Common Stock Iraded on the New York Stock Exchange et prices ranging from $9.50 to $28.00 per share. The closing price of the Company Common Stock on the New York Stock Exchange on May 2, 1983, was $24.25 per share. At such closing price per share, the holder of $1,000 principal amount of Debentures would receive, upon conversion, shares of Company Common Stock and cash for the fractional inferest having an aggregate value of $1,302.23. However, such value is subject to change depending on changes in the market price of Company Common Stock. SO LONG AS THE MARKET PRICE OF THE COMPANY COMMON STOCK IS $20.00 OR MORE PER SHARE, OEBENTUREHOLDERS UPON CONVERSION WILL RECEIVE COMPANY COMMON STOCK AND CASH IN LIEU OF ANY FRACTIONAL INTEREST HAVING A GREATER MARKET VALUE THAN THE CASH WHICH THEY WOULD RECEIVE UPON RECEMPTION. VOICE OF OUR SHADOW By Jonathan Carroll. 189 pp. $13.50. Viking, 40 West 23d St., New York, N.Y. 10010.

Reviewed by Jack Sullivan

ONE OF the pleasures of the ghost story is the willingness of the genre to risk or even abandon its identity. Once the supernatural begins to crupt in a tale, the reader invari-ably asks "Is it real?"

Sometimes, as in Ann Radcliffe's "The Mysteries of Udolpho," it is explained away, at other times, as in H.G. Wells's "The Plattner Story," it turns out — to our shuddery delight.
— to be the real thing. Occasionally, as in Poe's proto-Freudian "The Fall of the House." of Usher" or Le Fanu's "Green Tea," it could go either way.

Now Jonathan Carroll, author of "The Land of Laughs," seems to have invented a new variation—the tale that is convincingly supernatural in some episodes, psychological in others, and totally ambiguous in still others. Not only is there no resolution, there is not even convenient. is there no resonation, there is not even conven-tional Henry Jamesian ambiguity; just because the ending, for example, seems psychological does not necessarily banish the ghosts from earlier episodes back to their graves. Instead of the "gradual crescendo" advocated by ghost story writer M.R. James, Carroll gives us terrace dynamics - one experiment in goosebumps at a time, each one quite separate from

All this is rather confusing, and indeed advance grumbles have it that "Voice of Our Shadow" lacks the magic of Carroll's first novel. There is some truth to this: "The Land of Laughs," along with William Hjortsberg's "Falling Angel," is probably the most imaginative supernatural covel in 10 years, and is a best of the follow. On the other hand Carroll hard act to follow. On the other hand, Carroll clearly is attempting something different this ince: the story is not about magic at all but the lack of it. The narrator, Joseph Lennon, is a wimpy, guilt-nidden fellow so deficient in "a delight in life" that he must absorb it from the magnetic results as a something results as a something the magnetic results as a others, like a psychic vampire. To make mat-ters worse, his sources of magic have a way of turning up dead. In a flashback scene hair-rais-ingly true to the terrors of adolescence, Joe's sadistic big brother, Ross, is electrocuted be-cause Joe accidently pushes him onto a third rail when Ross is about to tell Bobby, the bully of the cheed that lee masturbates to a warr of the school, that loe masturbates to a year book picture of Bobby's sister. Later, when Joe moves to Vienna to outdistance the "guilt monsters" of his childhood, he blunders into: love triangle that produces another corpse, the time of his best friend, Paul. Soon Joe and Paul's widow, India, discover to their dis that Paul is as energetic in death as he was ir Carroll brings an array of apparitions to vig-id, startling life — not just an avenging love; but animals, children and even animated magiazines. A master of shifting tonalities, Carrol balances the grimmess of his content against the deceptive anniability of his storytelline voice. He is rather like the narrator's charming but dangerous childhood tormentors: "Indifferent environment who knows what mi have happened to the two of them. Both Bob by and Ross had an clan, the magician touch; that special rare ability to turn cruele into pink handkerchiefs and kindness into the

One of the oovel's most menacing turns, involves a typical Carroll conversation: "Once when I asked him if he ever saw himself grow ing old and dying, he said no. Instead, he said be envisioned an old man with gray hair and wrinkles who was called Paul Tate but wasn winkles who was called Paul Tate but wasn't him. It's like working a shift in a factory, see? I'm working one of the middle ones in the 35 to 40 shift, get it? Then some other man checks into my body and takes in from there. Suddenly Paul stops in mid-sentence: "His face was bloodless, but what really struck me was a kind of terrible stillness in his eyes and on his lips. It was gone in an instant, but it left his face looking drawn and blurred, as if some his face looking drawn and blurred, as if some thing important had gone out of him, leaving him only half filled."

This brilliant little sequence provides a mythos for the spine-tingling supernatural scenes that soon follow—and fans of Carrolly first novel will be delighted. But later the novel takes another turn, as apparitions melt into each other in ways that fulfill psychological patterns Carroll has set up just as carefully as his supernatural ones. For my money, the new chological evaluations. his supernatural ones. For my money, the psy-chological explanation is more satifying simply because the narrator's saturation in guilt is more frightening than any spook. But what about that ghostly white boxer, that "moving patch of snow in the night"? And what about those Playboy centerfolds piled on the bed seen by India as well as Paul, whose semisi organs have become leering faces?

Jack Sullivan, author of "Elegans Night, mares," is also the editor of "Lost Souls," a forthcoming collection of English ghost stories He wrote this review for The Washington Post,

ART BUCHWALD

Moonlight Class of '83

WASHINGTON — When edu-cational scores plummet in Alfredo, our science teacher, in the the United States everyone tends to white jacket carrying all those dirty hlame the school teachers. But this dishes? is too easy. The average salary for a and taking special courses, is $17,000 a year. Because many school teachers have to moonlight at another job to stay alive, they're not getting enough sleep to be sharp in the classroom.

I became aware of this when I took my nephew to dinner the other night.
"Look," he said. "There's my

English teacher." Where?" I asked

"The man comiog over in the waiter's uniform."
"He's your English teacher?" Sure, Hi, Mr. Peterson."

"Hello. Michael." Peterson said to my nephew. "What brings you bere on a school night?" "My uncle is taking me out for my birthday. How did I do on my English test today?" Michael

"I haven't been able to mark it yet. We had a big party of lobby-ists from the American Bankers' Association and they've kept me running. What would you like to Michael studied the menu and said, "What gives with the Cysters Nothing gives with the Oysters Rockefeller, Michael, Oysters Rockefeller cannot give. You must ask. 'How are the Oysters Rockefeller?"

Well, how are they?" "I would recommend them." "Okay, I'll take a shot at them." You can't shoot Oysters Rockefeiler. You can only eat them."

"Come on, Mt. Peterson, Don't ruin my birthday."
"I'm sorry, Michael, I forgot my place. As a waiter I shouldn't cor-

Stuttgart and Vienna.

Tass it would be it would be include them. "I'll call Mrs. Thompson, Michael's bomeroom teacher. She hasn't had a fare all night long."

"That's correct. He's a busboy teacher, after four years of college here, but as soon as he gets his master's degree in biophysics, I'm sure he'll become a waiter. The manager of this restaurant has had very good luck with the teaching staff of Warren Harding High School. As an alumnus, he tries to hire as many of us as he can. Miss Bellows, your math teacher, is the hatcheck girl, and Mr. Fallows, of the physical education department. is the bouncer in the bar."

"Is it degrading to work as a waiter at night and a school teacher in the daytime?" I asked Peterson.

"Oh, I don't ever tell anyone i moonlight in the daytime as a school teacher. If you let people know you're a teacher they tend to think you're wasting the taxpayer's money. But if you tell them you're a waiter they feel you're doing something worthwhile." You teachers have a tough life,"

"It could be worse. Most of the staff at Herbert Hoover High School work the oight shift at Na-tional Airport for Federal Express.

They never get any tips." We gave our order, and after Peterson left I said to Michael, "Is he a good teacher?"

Better than most. You know John Hanrahan, the kid I play football with? Well, be und his par-ents discovered his French teacher, Mr. Dubois, was working in a gas station. Dubois forgot to put the gas cap back on their tank, and John's parents were so angry when they got bome, they called the prin-cipal of the school and demanded Dubois be fired, because they said they didn't want their son to be taught French by someone who didn't even know how to pump gas."

"Was Dubois fired?" No, because fortunately the principal had done the same thing at the gas station he was working at We finished our dinner and

Trend Spotter

John Naisbitt Turns Bit and Pieces Into a Megaseller on 'Megatrends'

By Paul Hendrickson Washington Part Service
7ASHINGTON — John

Naisbitt isn't a futurologist predicting smell-o-vision; he is a "social forecaster," basing his estimates of what will happen to-morrow on what is published in the newspaper today.

His book, "Megatrends," is a
No. I best seller, is in its 15th printing and has sold half a millioo copies since October. But years ago in Utah, his Mormon elders were hoping Naishitt would become a missionary. Not only did he not do that, he left Utah and the church, winding up in Chicago and, later, Washington, living mainly hy his wits. "I think I'm a son of perdition." he says, not joking, com-plete with his full swath of reddisb beard. His mother still prays that her 54-year-old son will come back to the faith.

Here, at the Naisbitt Group, in his still slightly tentative offices, another kind of faith is being ex-pressed — in "content analysis." Naisbitt analyzes a trend - say, a growing backlash against television, or the waxing of concern about crime — through the sys-tematic reading and clipping and categorizing of millions of news items from thousands of individual copies of newspapers.

The news hole in a given paper on a given day is only so big, and if something comes in, then of necessity something must go out. So if you analyze what is coming in and what is going out, country-wide, on a systematic basis, you start to pick up shifts and move-ments, a nation's worries.

The technique is as old as the hills. The OSS used it in World War II to find out what was going on in the daily life of Nazi Germany. The historian and author Bruce Catton used the daily paper to reconstruct the American Civil War.

"My data base is like putting every newspaper morgue in the United States in one pile." Naisbitt says. In Denver and Stamford, Connecticut, and, to a lesser degree, in Washington, his staff are marking and clipping approximately 250 papers, 6,000 articles a week, 20,000 a mooth, to sort them into 13 categories, then into 200 additional subcategories.

Naishir kineralf mould week to the charge of oversimplification that all he's done is order the chaos, "give some selection to the supply." Incredible supply, for what we are swimming in right now, says the trend spotter, is "an increasingly diverse multiple-option society." That is a Naishitt huzz phrase.

He's also very good at pithy tines, such as. Trends, like horses, are easier to ride in the direction they are already going." Or.
"We are drowning in information but starved for knowledge." Or: "Lawyers are like beavers: They get in the mainstream and dam it

Trends, Naisbitt says, are generated from the bottom up though fads come from the top 00 additional subcategories. and industrial organizations are Naisbitt himself would reply to undergoing massive change.

Here is a John Naisbitt mega-trend. In fact, it's Megatrend No. I (out of 10) in the book: We are in the throes of a shift from an industrial age to an information society, or, put another way, we are moving from an economy resting on the motor car to an economy resting on the comput-er. And, trend within trend, we are moving from the hardware revolution of computers to the software age of them. So what else is new? "Megatrends" seems megasimple, nothing you didn't know. "Actually, the biggest compliment people pay me is when they say. 'But I sort of knew all that,' " Naisbitt counters. "Yes, the academics think it's too simple. I did get a nice note from Professor Daniel Bell at Harvard, though he may have just been acknowledging my stated debt to him in the front of the book. The New York Times the book. The New York Times review was very unhappy with my cheerfulness."

ture, not gloom and doom, is one of Naisbitt's distinguishing char-acteristic. Technology isn't going to kill us, he says. In fact, technology will make us free, make us re-explore the arts. the age-old questions. The future is going to be more exciting than ever, for "human beings always provide counter-ballast to technology, in spite of themselves."

In a sense, Naisbitt is the uo-likeliest of people to make his fortune forecasting. Once he was a Washington bureancrat trying to manel his way out. He worked as a top aide to HEW Secretary John W. Gardner. In Chicago he started Urban Research, a consulting firm. A couple of years ago he worked in Washington for the Yankelovich poll-taking firm. Somewhere in there, too, he had something called the Center for Today, requests for speeches come in at 20 to 30 a clip. "Well, I was always sure 'Megatrends' was going to be a best seller," he says, managing not to sound boastful. I could see people our there were longing for structure about where we are and where we're going. I had been around the country giving too many speeches to too many CEOs [chief executive officers] not to know the people in our group were on to something. Heck, I would run into people in Sweden, for instance, who would tell me they had seen 14th-generation-Xeroxes of our Trend Reports."

In the spring of 1969, in Chica-go, he had his moment of epi-phany: He was reading a Bruce Catton book when it hit him that newspapers, even 100-year-old newspapers, can be primary source material. "I went immediately to an out-of-town newsstand and bought 60 papers."

Asked to give an example of a trend newspaper, he brightens. "The Pacific Sun, Marin County, California, There's a cutting-edge oewspaper." He also thinks The Economist is a must for anybody doing his kind of work. And eventions the model of the Webinster of the Webinster. ry day be reads The Washington Post, The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal, He seldom clips or marks up these days. Leave that to the troops.

"How to categorize without getting emotionally involved — ah, that's the art," he says.

The choreographer George Balanchine, co-founder of the New York City Ballet, left an estimated $869,000 estate to his personal assistant and a principal dancer in the ballet, according to court pa-pers filed in New York. Andrei Balanchine, the choreographer's brother, who lives in the Soviet Union, was left two gold watches. Balanchine, who died April 30 at age 79, left nothing to his five wives, all top ballerinas — Tamara Geva, Alexandra Danilova, Vera Zorina, Maria Talichief and Tana-Zorina, Maria Tallchiel and Tana-qual LeClercq. Under the terms of the will, Barbara Horgan, the cho-reographer's personal assistant, who was named executor of his es-tate, and Karin von Aroklingen Gerwitz, a principal dancer with the ballet, share the royalties from 37 of his ballets. In addition, he left a co-on apartment in Manhattan to a co-op apartment in Manhattan to Gerwitz and a condominium in Gerwitz and a condominum in Southampton, New York to Hor-gan. Jerome Robbins, the co-ballet master in chief of the New York City Ballet, was left Balanchine's rights to the ballets "Firebird" and "Dulcinella" "Pulcinella."
